KITCHENS

From traditional Shaker to streamlined contemporary designs, these companies offer styles to suit all spaces

Naked

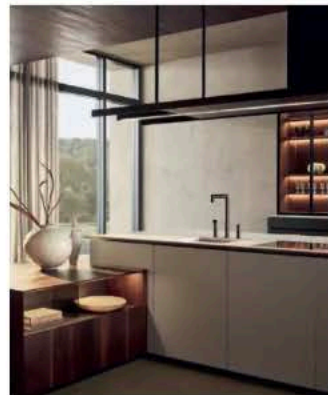

Each kitchen by this company is tailor-made in its manufacturing facility on an historic former RAF base in Norfolk. Taking a bespoke approach, Naked creates collections that appeal to a variety of tastes; these range from modern minimalist designs with J-groove integrated handles to traditional Shaker-influenced styles. Paint colours are sprayed on, achieving a beautiful and sleek finish that is also super tough. Kitchens from £25,000. nakedkitchens.com

Tom Howley

Specialising in bespoke Shaker-style, hand-painted kitchens, Tom Howley has a nationwide network of 20 showrooms. There you can find design inspiration, pick up expert advice and see the brand's curated palette of 24 paints. The company also now offers bolt-on spaces, which include walk-in pantries, bespoke bars, media areas and boot rooms. Kitchens from £25,000. tomhowley.co.uk

Poliform

This super stylish Italian brand is known for its refined, modern kitchens. The new 'Artex Pro' design (pictured below) is a reinterpretation of the company's popular 'Artex' model, with an appealing, more contemporary aesthetic. Its distinctive tapered edges create an illusion of lightness, enhanced by a worktop that appears to float above the base units. 'Artex Pro' kitchens from £98,000. poliform.it

Ledbury Studio

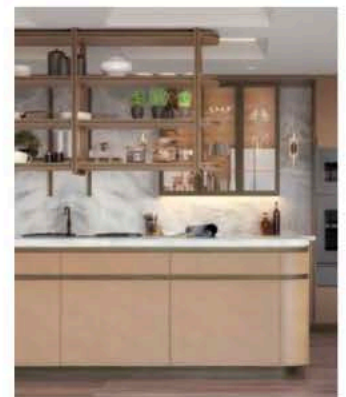

Founded by the designer Charlie Smallbone, Ledbury Studio fuses modern kitchen designs (above) with artisan craftsmanship using natural materials including wood and metal. Enjoy personal service at its London showroom. Kitchens from £70,000. ledburystudio.com

Artichoke

Known for its heritage joinery, Somerset-based Artichoke makes beautiful bespoke kitchens and traditional solid-wood furniture. Its signature approach is to create rooms that appear to have always been part of the house. Kitchens from £240,000. artichoke.co.uk

Pluck

Bespoke cabinets in pared-back styles, often with creative colour combinations, are made by Pluck in its London workshop. Naturally coloured Douglas fir veneer finishes feature in its collaboration with Schotten & Hansen. Kitchens from £35,000. pluck.co.uk

Smallbone

Founded more than 45 years ago, Smallbone produces timeless, elegant kitchens that continue to be relevant thanks to its passion for craftsmanship and innovation. A collaboration with the celebrated chef Jason Atherton has recently resulted in The Atherton x Smallbone Kitchen Collection, which includes a stylish washed oak island with inlaid aged brass detailing (above). Kitchens from £100,000. smallbone.co.uk
